

Employee Handbook

RAG Practice Document — Fictional Company

Company: NovaTech Solutions Pvt. Ltd.

Document Version: 2026.1

Purpose: This fictional employee handbook is designed for testing a PDF-based Retrieval-Augmented Generation (RAG) application. It contains policies distributed across multiple pages so that users can test semantic retrieval, chunking, page tracking, and source display.

Suggested RAG Questions

- How many annual leave days can an employee take?
- Can employees work from home?
- What is the notice period for resignation?
- How are business travel expenses reimbursed?
- What is the maternity leave entitlement?
- How often are performance reviews conducted?
- What happens if an employee is late repeatedly?
- Who approves international travel?

1. Working Hours and Attendance

The standard working schedule at NovaTech Solutions is Monday through Friday, from 9:00 AM to 6:00 PM. Employees are expected to complete 8 working hours per day, excluding a one-hour lunch break.

Employees should record attendance using the company's designated attendance system. Any missed attendance entry must be corrected within three working days with manager approval.

Employees arriving more than 30 minutes late should inform their reporting manager as early as possible. Repeated late arrivals may be reviewed as part of the employee's attendance record.

Employees who need to leave the office during working hours for personal reasons should inform their manager and update their availability status.

2. Annual Leave Policy

Full-time employees are entitled to 20 days of paid annual leave per calendar year. Employees joining during the year receive leave on a prorated basis.

Annual leave should normally be requested at least five working days before the planned start date. The reporting manager is responsible for approving or declining the request.

Employees may carry forward up to 10 unused annual leave days into the next calendar year. Any carried-forward balance must be used by March 31 of the following year.

Leave taken without approval may be treated as unauthorized absence. In exceptional situations, employees should notify their manager as soon as reasonably possible.

3. Sick Leave

Employees are eligible for 12 days of paid sick leave per calendar year. Sick leave may be used for the employee's own illness or medical recovery.

For an absence of more than two consecutive working days, the employee may be asked to provide appropriate medical documentation.

Employees should inform their manager before the start of the workday whenever possible. In emergencies, notification should be provided as soon as practical.

4. Work From Home Policy

Eligible employees may work from home up to two days per week, subject to team requirements and manager approval.

Employees working remotely must remain available during core collaboration hours from 10:00 AM to 4:00 PM and must attend scheduled meetings unless excused.

Remote work is not an automatic entitlement. Managers may require employees to work from the office when business needs, client meetings, training, or team events require physical presence.

Employees must use company-approved devices and secure network connections when accessing confidential company information from home.

5. Maternity and Paternity Leave

Eligible employees are entitled to 26 weeks of maternity leave in accordance with applicable company policy and local statutory requirements.

Employees should notify Human Resources and their manager as early as possible regarding planned maternity leave so that work responsibilities can be transitioned smoothly.

Eligible employees are entitled to 15 working days of paid paternity leave following the birth or adoption of a child. Paternity leave should normally be taken within three months of the qualifying event.

The company will administer parental leave in accordance with applicable law. Where statutory requirements provide a greater benefit, the statutory requirement will apply.

6. Performance Reviews

Formal performance reviews are conducted twice each year, normally in June and December.

Performance reviews consider achievement of goals, quality of work, collaboration, communication, customer impact, and demonstration of company values.

Employees are encouraged to maintain regular one-to-one discussions with their managers throughout the year rather than waiting for the formal review cycle.

Performance ratings may be considered when determining promotions, compensation adjustments, development plans, and recognition awards.

7. Promotions and Career Development

Employees may be considered for promotion based on sustained performance, role readiness, demonstrated skills, business requirements, and availability of an appropriate position.

A promotion is not guaranteed solely by length of service. Employees are expected to demonstrate capability at the next level before promotion is approved.

Employees may request career-development discussions with their manager at any time. Development activities may include training, mentoring, project assignments, certifications, or expanded responsibilities.

8. Salary and Payroll

Employees are paid monthly. Salary is normally credited on the last working day of each month, subject to banking schedules and public holidays.

Employees should review their monthly payslip and report discrepancies to Human Resources or Payroll within 30 calendar days.

Salary information is confidential and should not be shared through unauthorized public channels. Employees may discuss compensation concerns directly with Human Resources or their manager.

9. Business Travel and Expenses

Business travel must be approved by the employee's manager before booking. International travel also requires approval from the relevant business unit head.

Employees should use company-approved travel booking channels whenever available.

Reasonable business travel expenses may be reimbursed when supported by valid receipts and submitted through the expense system within 15 calendar days of returning from the trip.

The company may reimburse eligible expenses such as transportation, accommodation, meals, and approved incidental costs, subject to applicable limits and policy requirements.

Personal expenses, fines, entertainment unrelated to business activities, and costs incurred by accompanying family members are not normally reimbursable.

10. Code of Conduct and Workplace Behavior

Employees are expected to act professionally, honestly, respectfully, and ethically in all workplace interactions.

Harassment, discrimination, bullying, retaliation, threats, and other inappropriate conduct are prohibited.

Employees should report serious workplace concerns through their manager, Human Resources, or the designated ethics reporting channel.

Retaliation against an employee who raises a concern in good faith is prohibited.

11. Information Security and Confidentiality

Employees must protect confidential company, customer, and employee information. Confidential information should only be accessed when required for legitimate business purposes.

Passwords must not be shared. Employees must follow company requirements for multi-factor authentication and device security.

Company information must not be uploaded to unauthorized personal storage services or external AI tools without appropriate approval.

Employees must immediately report suspected security incidents, lost company devices, or accidental disclosure of confidential information to the Information Security team.

12. Resignation and Notice Period

Employees who resign must submit a formal resignation through the company's designated process.

The standard notice period is 60 calendar days for full-time employees, unless the employment agreement or applicable law specifies otherwise.

During the notice period, employees are expected to complete knowledge transfer, return company property, and support a reasonable transition of responsibilities.

The final settlement process normally begins after required exit formalities are completed. Employees should return badges, laptops, access cards, and other company property before their last working day.

13. Remote Work and Information Security

Employees working remotely must ensure that confidential conversations cannot be overheard by unauthorized individuals.

Public Wi-Fi should not be used for sensitive company activities unless an approved secure connection is enabled.

Printed confidential documents should be stored securely and disposed of using approved confidential-waste procedures.

Remote employees are responsible for maintaining a professional work environment and being reachable through approved communication tools during agreed working hours.

14. Employee Support and HR Contacts

Employees may contact Human Resources for questions about leave, payroll, benefits, performance reviews, career development, workplace concerns, or exit procedures.

Managers are the first point of contact for routine work scheduling, leave planning, and team-specific questions.

For urgent information-security concerns, employees should immediately contact the Information Security team through the company's approved incident-reporting channel.

For emergencies, employees should follow local emergency procedures and contact the appropriate emergency services.
